

Fishamble's A PLAY FOR IRELAND - Submission Form

In 2011, Fishamble called out for tiny plays for contemporary Ireland, and received over 1,700 submissions. TINY PLAYS FOR IRELAND subsequently played to sell out runs in Ireland, generated similar initiatives in Australia and Russia, transferred to the Kennedy Center and Irish Arts Center in the US, and was called 'a brilliant project...really wonderful' by President Higgins.

Now, in 2017, Fishamble is looking for an idea for one, big ambitious play for a cast of 4-6 actors, that bursts with humanity and tackles a subject about which the playwright feels passionate. We are looking for A PLAY FOR IRELAND that captures the zeitgeist of the country.

This will be a two-year process, which will encourage the citizens of Ireland to write plays, engaging people of all ages, from all communities, throughout the country. The initiative will mentor playwrights throughout the island of Ireland, and result in the production of a very special new play.

Fishamble is committed to new plays that have something important to say about the world in which we live. It wants to encourage the citizens of Ireland to express themselves through theatre, to engage the public in making plays, and to engage with audiences throughout Ireland.
